SNS at work

- 51% employees visit SNS at least once per day
- For both professional and personal purposes
- Companies further embrace social media at work
- Work-related benefits
 - Awareness of colleagues
 - Stronger working relationships
 - Reach out to employees that they don't know
 - Better productivity?

Privacy Challenges

- Employees
 - Mixing personal and professional spheres
 - Peer pressure
 - Social undermining
- Employers
 - Security risks
 - Inadvertent disclosure of confidential info

12	thefella	Is anyone going to be online at 17:00 hours today and able to buy me some gig tickets?
13	amyhoy	wait, what the fuck? twitter ate a whole bunch of my tweets from the last 3 days.
14	matt_hunt	On today's episode of Matt... Sky HD vs Screenplay.
15	oliekav	Sweet, 4 tickets for the Newcastle game, alright seats as well
16	codinghorror	I don't mean to harsh on the ASP.NET default view engine, but it is a process of death by a thousand tiny legacy cuts. needs a do-over.
17	gavinellott	I'm currently knee deep in stemaps.
18	madrobby	we now have iTunes dj running in the office, peeps can vote for songs with their iphones. stole the idea from @natmechanics
19	elamadej	Have I already mentioned that you should all follow @dailysalestips :-)?
20	elamadej	RT @applicake If everything goes as planned, we're launching another great web app this week. Stay tuned. This is going to be big :-)
21	cheeaun	Later tonight, I'll be showing a really cool CSS3 example. Stay tuned.

32	utku	#tukuval was awesome fun, thanks for the photos @anniemole: http://is.gd/s1MV and @vikkichowney: http://is.gd/sfUJ :-)
33	codinghorror	new biggest ASP.NET MVC mistake: using the crapacular default ASP.NET view engine. Use Spark or something else. Trust me. You'll be sorry.
34	oliekav	Yesssss..... I am in the que for the Liverpool tickets, only number 88...fcks sake
35	utku	Quoting @noamso on his new cycling shoes with cleats: "It's like upgrading from a PC to a Mac."
36	rem	Thanks for the responses on Dreamweaver + JS. I suspected that was the case, but didn't want to point my finger without being sure!

Should you do it at your desk or not — what the workers say

Amanda Stobbart, 25, recruitment consultant: "People want to chat as much as they can and we are a nation who work longer hours so we should be entitled to leisure at work."

Steve Hamer, 29, IT worker: "I think if you're on the internet all day then people are going to notice even if you are not being monitored. You will be stopped."

Warren Gram, 22, IT worker: "If you get all your work done then I don't see the problem. If you've got nothing else to do then at least you are occupied."

Marie Douin, 25, recruitment consultant: "I think it is easier for companies to ban such sites than to try to monitor when people go on them."

Oxana Medvedeva, 25, language teacher: "I think it is fair that businesses should ban it completely because during work hours you are paid to work."

Liam O'Neill, 28, investment banker: "I only succumbed to Facebook last week. I think a lot of people do use it for up to an hour a day, which I guess is acceptable."
